Burnaby Hotel Packages - The majority of travelers these days are searching for hotel ratings on the Internet, however, there are a lot of places to find these ratings. Before the Internet, people will search for hotel ratings in certain travel guides which were published by companies like Michelin, or Mobile or AAA, the American Automobile Association. For example, when individuals were getting ready for a vacation, they can check with their local AAA office prior to departing. If they were AAA members, they can pick up books on locations they intended to travel, as well as find out which hotels and motels on route were suggested. Each facility in this ranking process was and still is, ranked by number of diamonds. The higher the diamonds represent properties that are considered to be better quality.

Several ratings organizations will rate hotels using smiley faces, stars or numbers. The more smiley faces or stars would normally imply better quality in that specific hotel in addition to more amenities. It could be very difficult and also confusing when individuals try to compare the very same hotel over numerous rating services because they won't consistently rank the same with every rating organization.

There are several well-known on line hotel ratings businesses such as: Orbitz, Travelocity, Expedia, Sidestep, Hotels.com, Hotwire, TravelWeb, TravelPost and PriceLine. There are other companies to search also. Most of these companies earn by booking hotels and thus, their ratings have to be taken with that in mind. Of course, if the companies book customers into substandard accommodation, it is not likely that patrons will utilize their service again, so there is obviously some incentive to truthfully rate the hotels in the first place.

Many travel companies will offer their consumers a satisfaction guarantee. This can be useful for customers who select their hotel based on ratings or by the amenities that are offered. For example, if a hotel provides wireless Internet service and truly doesn't have it, some hotel ratings companies will reimburse their clients' money back or book them somewhere else. It remains in the interest of these rating companies to ensure that patrons are content with the hotels they select.

People searching for accommodation must not only rely upon hotel ratings with hotel discount and large booking companies. Another way to assess the quality of the hotel is by taking reader reviews into consideration. A good place to hear about first hand travel impressions and accounts is through businesses such as TripAdvisor. On these kinds of sites, those who have stayed at the place personally review the accommodation for the benefit of other travelers.

The info from independent reviews are usually candid and could truly be helpful and may be able to paint a more accurate picture for the patron. Some reviews may help individuals choose against staying at a particular hotel or motel if they are not up to par. Of course, such ratings can be extremely biased. Also, one terrible review might not mean the hotel itself is poor, but numerous ratings suggesting faults like for instance unfriendly service or poor housekeeping or lack of amenities may well be a good sign that customers must search elsewhere for a hotel with better options.
